

Susan G. Hoffheimer retired from teaching for the Mason City Schools seven years ago and began painting. The patience learned during 31 years of teaching fifth through eighth graders has come to good use in her painting. She receives great satisfaction from taking a piece of white paper and turning it into a picture with color and dimension. She particularly loves the details!! Although a challenge, she finds painting very relaxing and soothing – she can completely lose herself in a piece.

Susan began her painting by picking up a brush and some paints, and attending local workshops and then ventured further, taking workshops and classes across the country. She began working in watercolor, but has turned to oil in the last two years. She is a member of the Queen City Art Club, the Cincinnati Art Club, the Cincinnati Watercolor Society, and the Woman's Art Club. She was awarded Second Place in the painting division at the Mason Art Show in 2008. More of her work can be seen on her website <http://web.me.com/shoffheimer>
